INTRODUCTION

The TUC is the voice of Britain at work. We represent more than 5 million workers in 48 unions.

Our publications give guidance and policy advice to union officers, reps and the members they look after.

We cover all the issues that affect working people, such as employment rights, equalities and health and safety.

Some of our books are bestsellers: for example, Hazards at Work, our authoritative guide to safe and healthy workplaces. The sixth edition will be published in 2020. Then there's the TUC Workplace Manual, acclaimed for its wealth of practical advice and knowledge. This too will appear in a new edition late next year.

Many titles focus on our core aims of fighting discrimination at work and promoting decent jobs.

For those reading on smartphones and tablets, many of our free titles are also available as PDFs and ePubs. And TUC Education produce excellent webinars and eNotes based on the content of many of our publications.

Finally, one you shouldn't miss is the TUC Directory, which provides an unrivalled source of contacts and stats on the TUC and its member unions.

We hope you find lots of interest in this catalogue and please get in touch and let us know what you think!

CAMPAIGN PLAN

The TUC's Campaign Plan complements the campaigns and industrial priorities of individual unions and offers a platform for members of different unions to work together on campaigns locally, through trades councils, regionally and nationally.

Our Campaign Plan for 2019–20 focuses on three priorities:

1. Brexit and rebuilding the UK

The big issues highlighted by the referendum vote still haven't been addressed. We will campaign for an outcome to the Brexit crisis that protects jobs, rights at work and peace in Northern Ireland, and argue for an investment-first economy in the UK and internationally.

2. Building class unity and winning a new deal for working people

We believe that every job should be a great job – and everyone should be able to work with skill, dignity and fairness. We will promote the TUC's New Deal Charter and campaign for unions to be given new rights to access every workplace and set pay and conditions across industries through collective bargaining.

3. Growing the union movement and tackling the far right

The far right are on the march in Britain and across the globe. They are exploiting genuine grievances in a bid to divide working people against each other, notably by scapegoating migrants and Muslims.

We will work with international partners to tackle the global threat of the far right, defend workers' rights and build stronger unions.

THE ECONOMY

Touchstone Pamphlets (and the shorter Touchstone Extra reports) are published by the TUC. They are not statements of TUC policy, but instead are designed to inform and stimulate debate on the most pressing issues facing British policy makers. More details can be found at tuc.org.uk/touchstonepamphlets

These beautiful pamphlets are now available for free to unions, excluding postage and packaging. Please email publications@tuc.org.uk for more information on bulk orders.

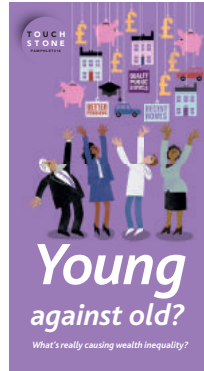

Young Against Old? What's really causing wealth inequality? (EC152)

ISBN 978 1 85006 968 3

Today's young people are having to deal with falling wages, rising house prices and increasingly insecure jobs. But is cutting benefits for older people really the answer? This pamphlet challenges the myths that all pensioners are rich and that reducing older people's benefits would be a solution to young people's problems.

How to Boost the Wage Share (EC151)

ISBN 978 1 85006 944 7

Written by Stewart Lansley and Howard Reed, this booklet describes how increasing the wage share will ensure growth is sustainable and can boost living standards, relieving the pressure on many middle- and low-income families.

Making a Contribution: social security for the future (EC150)

ISBN 978 1 85006 928 7

Social security has rarely been less popular: many people believe that the system is widely abused and benefits should be cut. This Touchstone report argues that the perceptions of abuse are mistaken and that revived and enhanced contributory benefits could help to re-build support and put us in a better position to address the problems of an ageing society while improving Britain's economic performance.

UNIONLEARN

Unionlearn is the education and skills organisation of the TUC. We work with unions, companies and the government to promote lifelong learning and develop skills in the workplace.

Union learning is supporting more than 200,000 learners a year to access all forms of training and development at all levels, from courses to improve literacy and numeracy through to higher level skills programmes. Some highlights from the past year (2018-19) include 35,800 English and maths learners, 28,500 people attending ICT courses, 35,500 attending continuing professional development training and more than 8,000 apprenticeships being directly supported. In addition, 135 new workplace learning centres were opened or enhanced their facilities and 123 new Learning Agreements were signed with employers.

Unionlearn produces a wide range of publications, including Learning Rep, a quarterly e-magazine and Supporting Learners News, a bi-monthly e-newsletter. Recent publications include: Supporting Learners: a guide for union reps, a valuable resource for reps on providing effective information and advice to workplace learners; Closing the Digital Divide shows how union reps can support workers develop their digital skills; and Career Kickstart Reviews, a practical guide to provide career support to young union members. All these publications and other resources can be ordered free from the unionlearn website.

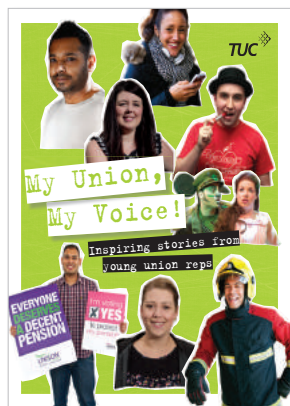

Throughout the year, we produce a range of research papers, policy reports and campaigning documents to help promote learning in every sector and every region of England. These can all be downloaded from unionlearn.org.uk/publications
