

Peggy-Ann Fraser trained at Mountview Theatre School as an Actress. She has appeared in Television shows such as Casualty and Call the Midwife.

A keen trade union activist with a special interest in diversity issues. She served on Equity Council, the executive body of the Actors Union from 2010-2016.

One of the particular issues she focused on was the lack of experience among make-up-artist employed on Television and film set when required to work with afro hair, and darker skin tones. As a result of her raising this concern, she was interviewed by The Guardian newspaper, and a few months later BECTU opened a training programme specifically to address the issue,

She is currently writing her first one-woman Show, a stage play entitled "Millie Windrush Journey".
